Man Charged In Auto Theft

A 20-year-old Salem man faces auto theft charges as the result of a Highlandtown area crash in which the car he was driving struck two gasoline pumps, a sign and a parked truck Sunday afternoon.

Vernon Ralph Etters of Salem R. D. 3 was treated at City Hospital for abrasions of the right elbow and both knees received in the mishap yesterday at 4:45 p. m. along Route 39 about a mile east of Highlandtown.

The Ohio Highway Patrol at Lisbon said Etters, driving a 1959 coach, veered off the left side of the road and into the service station of Roland Mc-Kenzie of Wellsville R.D. 1, ramming the pumps and 1957 truck owned by McKenzie.

The patrol said the car owned by Robert E. Rouse of Salem . D. had been taken earlier. There was extensive damage to the auto, officers said.

Etters was transferred to the Salem Central Clinic. The patrol said he faces charges of auto larceny and parole violations.

Salem police, who said Etters is on parole after conviction of auto theft, reported he admitted theft of three other Salem area Church Rites cars over the weekend. Rouse's auto was stolen be- Follow Early annual Christmas clearing house was a complete success, thanks to the help of community organizations and individuals, according to W. E. (Bill) Hiscox, chairman

Through their donations of money and food, the clearing house took care of 52 families -91 adults and 112 children. There was just one oversighttwo families with the same name Hiscox said. He has arranged to take the missed family a food basket for New Year's Day.

Hiscox said the clearing house received $547.60 and spent $522.20. The balance of $25.40 is the first in the project's history. Hiscox said it will be used to launch the 1965 project unless used sooner in event of an emergency like a fire, accident or other misfortune.

A Resolution: Boost, Don't Knock

With a new year at hand, it's time to take stock again. This is primarily an individual matter as we look at the record and sift desirable and undesirable traits.

However, there is something which East Liverpool residents can do collectively during 1965. We can all put our shoulders to the wheel and keep things rolling in the direction of a constantly - improving community.

Commendable strides have been made during 1964. And there's no reason why even greater strides cannot be made in the 365 challenging days which lie ahead.

Everything "won't be coming up roses," as the songwriters put it. There will be problems. There will be mistakes. There will be criticism.

And criticism there should be. When you're trying to get things done there's certain to be disagreement. But to be beneficial, it must be constructive criticism.

Irresponsible, hastily - formed opinions can be only unjust and harmful. For a glaring example, one need look no further than the thoughtless remarks of a syndicated writer who literally "passed through" here on an occasion and in a flash came up with an analysis of the community which was anything but favorable. While we strongly disagree with his findings, it wasn't so much the conclusions of the writer that were shocking, but the speed and the careless manner in which these conclusions were

This was irresponsible reporting and thinking at its worst. If nothing else, however, it serves as an excellent example of how not to pass judgment. Let's have none of this on a local level in the year

During 1964 we've commented from time to time on the progressive feeling which has taken over in East Liverpool. And it's a wonderful feeling! Let's make it felt even more during 1965. While most New Year's resolutions will be of a personal nature, make room on your list for one that will concern a dynamic, energetic boosting of your community.

East Liverpool can only be good as its people. Fortunately, they're fine people on the whole. With a united approach, the coming year holds promise of ever greater gains on a communitywide basis.

'Good Morning!'

"Good morning, even though it's a wet

These words Sunday came from a stranger. They were accompanied by a pleasant smile.

How fine it would be if more of us would put into practice the friendliness that this man preached. It could do much to make the day brighter in many, many

The Point Is Debatable

An assertion made repeatedly that the 27,145,161 voters who favored the Goldwater-Miller ticket on Nov. 3 are the statistical hard core of Republican strength is being examined by skeptics

Earl Mazo reports in The New York Times that a major voter-opinion polling firm, using the same interviewing method that proved accurate in previous forecasts, including the outcome of the 1964 presidential election, believes the hard core of Goldwater-Miller strength is about onefifth of 27,145,161 votes, or something less than 51/2 million.

The point is debatable; that must be admitted.

It also is critical to the political deliberations now going on inside Republican circles. It will help to determine future leadership. Those 27,145,161 votes constitute the strongest argument for continuing Goldwater-Miller domination of the party organization.

The clients for whom the poll is being prepared, says The New York Times, are mostly Republicans, including some important contributors to the Goldwater-Miller campaign.

They expect it to show what realistic discounting of the 27,145,161 vote total will bring the hard-core residue of 100 per cent Goldwater support down to - a point that will demolish the claim the vote total reflects that much support for the defeated

Obviously, the total includes all Republican voters who never deviate from the party ticket - people who always vote for the party candidate.

Less obviously, it includes Republicans who had doubts about the 1964 ticket but remained faithful one time around.

Still less obviously, it included disgruntled Democrats in Southern states who were wreaking revenge on President Johnson for the Civil Rights Act.

It also includes disgruntled people elsewhere who were voting against something, not for Sen. Goldwater. These people are not devotees of Goldwter, the Repupblican party, the American way of life, or anything else. They are bitterend opponents of certain things they don't

Letter From Max By Martin Miller

Dear Truman Twill:

This is a personal reminiscence about a friend of mine who just died. I trust you will indulge me in my talking about him, because I doubt if I ever mentioned him

He was the sort of fellow who, if you knew him well, you constantly bored your other acquaintances by bragging about. I met him by accident when I got a job as a newspaper correspondent in a small town. I got off a bus with a suitcase in my hand and asked a policeman if there were any rooming houses. He said, "Yes, just one block down this street. It's the big yellow house on the

VERNON BAILEY, a bachelor all his life, lived in that house with his two sisters. I stayed there for the three years that I worked for the paper

The living room was lined with cabinets containing books and recordings. I liked to read. The first hint I gave Vernon that I wanted to read some of his books was, "Boy, you sure have a lot of good reading material in here.'

He cooly replied, "Yes, I do," but no offer to lend me any books.

A few days later, I dropped in at the library and the librarian asked where I was living. When I told her the Baileys, she said, "I don't see why you are coming to this library when Vernon has such a good one right in the house where you

Soon after that, Vernon said to me, "Hazel Rugg (the librarian who also has since died) tells me you were at her library to get some books. You are welcome to borrow any of mine any time you want to."

You can imagine your own version of Miss Rugg's telling him to loosen up and let me have some books.

THAT WAS THE start of our friendship. I mention the book incident to show how reserved he was to strangers and what little chance I ever would have had to know him had I not roomed in his house and had not the librarian gone to bat for

Besides all the books and recordings in the living room, there also was a grand piano and a record player.

His recordings ranged from the risque to the classics, as did his books.

By occupation he was an armature winder in an industrial plant. But music, literature, art and in his later life, travel, were his chief interests. He learned Spanish and visited Mexico yearly.

As a youth he played the clarinet in a band which toured Finland, the native country of his parents. Later, he learned to play the organ in a nearby college music auditorium, played a two-piano concert with the college music professor and entertained on the piano in his home if he thought the guests merited it. He dictated the selections for such occasion.

Once he was discovered concentrating on a book in his lap while listening to a Sibelius symphony. "Sh-h-h," he shushed the intruder. "This is Stokowski conducting a Sibelius work and he admits he doesn't understand Sibelius so I want to follow the score as the music is played to see how Stokowski interprets Sibelius. So far he has not dared to change anything and is following the score exactly.'

As you know, this was not my cup of tea, which may account in part for my admiration of Vernon.

ONE LAST little item. He once confided that in his younger days he had come home late at night, found the house locked up and crawled in through the coal chute. "Gee, was I dirty!" he said.

Faithfully yours,

Strong Words By A Man Named Carey

There's a Rabelaisian touch to a set of minutes now in the government's possession, which if properly bound and sold could ease President

These minutes, the record of nego-

budget wor-

tiations between Electrical Workers leader Jim Carey and the Victor Riesel General Electric Co., reveal Mr. Carey as a virulent, outspoken man with a devotion to graphic Anglo-Saxon shock language which would make an off-Broadway avant garde playwright writhe in envy

During the negotiations Mr. Carey, president of the International Union of Electrical Workers (IUE), did, however, wax charitable. He mellowed and referred to GE attorneys, labor relations men and vice presidents as "lousy" and "jerks" and threatened only to throw them out of windows. Those were Carey's more compassionate moments during the controversial negotiations which now are being debated across the

WHEN HE STRUCK a less tolerant attitude, he warned that he might pull arms and legs out of sockets of the businessmen.

"I'll break both of your arms and bat you over the head. I'll pull them out at the knuckles, Mr. Moore, if you make it appear that I accept this with favor," Carey is quoted as telling Philip Moore, GE's manager, Employe Relations Servce, on Aug. 30, 1960.

The record has just been made available as a result of a National Labor Relations Board ruling the other day that the company was guilty of unfair labor practices during the '60 bargaining. The case has been before the board for more than four years.

On Aug. 31, 1960, the minutes state Cary warned: "Mr. Moore, I'm telling you this - misrepresent my attitude and hell will break loose, physically and violently. You even speak for me and see what happens. I'll break you apart."

Later that day Carey appeared even more virile when the minutes show he advised: "Let us get that straight. I have no commitment with you, Mr. Moore, and I'm not a liar. I'll break every bone in your body. Damn it, I'll come over there and bust you right in the literary crop of that day in the bargaining room in New York. But let us move to other expressive moments. Some of those moments must be lost to journalism because of

THIS IS HARDLY the entire

Carey's references to various parts of the body. But readers might find drama in Carey's eloquence. On Sept. 27 the record states he argued that, "I'll make my point if I have to kill somebody to do it.' Or on Oct. 1, when the minutes show he said "I hope that if anyone gets hurt in the blood bath that it is one of the man-Then he specifically referred to Ralph Cordiner (then chairman of the board), Jack Parker

Apparently Carey was not always happy in the bargaining conference. Once he said: "I'm a president. I don't even know what I'm doing dealing with

MOORE WASN'T always the object of Carey's disaffection. On Sept. 7, the minutes show, the IUE president turned to Tom Hilbert, GE's Labor Relations Counsel:

"Don't agitate me, Mr. Hilbert. I have no objections to turning over your car or beating you or Mr. Moore over the

But Carey soon got back to his bete noir

"I'm going to push it down your throat, Mr. Moore . . . You want me to throw you out of this room. You want me to, Mr. Moore?'

The next day, Carey appeared more irritated. The minutes record this quote: "I will pick you up and throw you out the window," Carey warned Hilbert, 'except it isn't high enough. You are not Khrushchev or Castro, you know. I would like to get this meeting question resolved.

And six days later, Carey must have been in bad humor. Again he turned to the company lawyer and the record notes this quote: "You can all look forward to a blood bath in these communities. It will be your blood, Mr. Hilbert, not the blood of the production work-

All this and far more are part of the official document. It was entered into the record of the famed NLRB case by Harold Richman, counsel for the general counsel of the NLRBwith the consent of lawyers for the union (Ben Sigal) and for the company (Dave Benetar).

It was stipulated among all counsel that these minutes of the national level negotiations during the months between mid-July and the end of October should have the same "force and effect" as if witnesses personally appeared and gave testimony concerning the matter contained in the minutes.

Stronger Controls Urged Over Firearms

This is the story of a single life lost in the unsafe society of today. But it has significance for the lives of many other persons who could face the same dangers. Charles W. Fitzmaurice enlisted in the Marine Corps private in 1936 and became a second lieutenant in 1943. David Lawrence He served 18 months in the Pacific area during World War II, and participated in the campaigns on Saipan and Iwo Jima. In 1952 and 1953, he fought in the Korean War. He was given several citations and battle stars, became a lieutenant colonel, and was regarded as an oustanding officer in the Mairne Corps.

The colonel and his wife and four children were in their home in a Virginia suburb of Washington Saturday night, Dec. 12, when there came a knock at the entrance. As the colonel opened the door, he was shot in the abdomen and killed. Later, police said the weapon used was a shotgun.

The assassin has not yet been found. Since Col. Fitzmaurice was serving as assistant head of the promotions branch in the Personnel Department of the Marine Corps at the Navy Annex in Arlington, Va., it is being widely speculated that per-haps the killing was done by someone with a personal grudge connected with the colonel's

Another possibility is that a deranged mind-similar to that of Lee Harvey Oswald, who killed President Kennedy-was responsible for this heinous

THE MARINE COLONEL was not a national figure, so there will be no memorial centers or monuments built to honor him. He will doubtless soon be forgotten — though he served his country faithfully and with distinction both in war and in The bereaved family has received the condolences of the community but for them and the rest of the country the unanswered question is why nothing has been done since the assassination of President Kennedy to prohibit the continued possession of lethal weapons by individuals who ought not to be permitted to own or rent them.

There is, of course, widespread opposition to any limits being placed on the sale of weapons intended for lawful use. It would be unwise to abolish altogether the possession of guns for protection against marauders or for enjoyment in sports. But certainly there is a rising public opinion in favor of requring licenses for all those who own guns, and periodic examinations to determine whether the individual can be expected to refrain from using such weapons improperly.

EVERY DRIVER of an automobile, before obtaining a licnse, must appear for examination to determine whether he knows how to operate a car and has no impairment of his faculties that would make him an unsafe driver. This rule has for years been in effect in all states of the Union, and the purpose is to to protect society against individuals who are physically, mentally or emotionally unfitted to drive a car

A license often is suspended or revoked after a conviction for such violations as reckless or drunken driving. Many states also require periodic examinations for retention of a li-

The states have a right to impose restrictions on the use of rifles, pistols, shotguns, or any other firearms. Certainly if licenses to own firearms were issued only after a medical certificate were furnished, the community would be better protected than it is today.

This method might not always be an effective safeguard, as there are some people who become deranged suddenly and would use guns recklessly but the percentage of those who might take human life, including their own, could be materially cut down if there were s o m e resrtictions imposed upon the possession of weapons which can be used to kill.

It may be wondered how many more crimes of violence will have to be committed before the local authorities throughout the country will begin to take steps to protect their communities against the irresponsible use of rifles or pistols or shotguns.

There certainly is no valid reason for banning all use of firearms, as there are many legitimte purposes for their employment. To require, however, examinations and to restrict the sale or rental of firearms to persons who can present medical certificates testing to their sound mental condition are certainly within the Constitution

Letter To The Editor

During the next few months. the Congress and all the state legislatures except Kentucky, Mississippi and Virginia are scheduled to convene in regular session - 43 in January, two in February, one in April and two in May. This situation is certain to produce a large number of bills to control the ownership and use of firearms. Many anti-gun laws will be proposed by persons who believe that such a law will prevent crime or that it will assist in the arrest and conviction of criminals.

The American people seem to have developed an inclination to try to eliminate problems by passing laws, especially laws prohibiting people from doing things by which a small minority cause trouble.

Much of the sentiment against people owning and using firearms is based very largely on a notion that if guns were strictly regulated there would not be so many murders and robberies and such. Most proposed firearms legislation is pointed in the wrong direction. It disarms the honest, law - abiding citizen, while it fails miserably in its avowed purpose of disarming the criminal. It is aimed at outlawing the gun rather than punishing the criminal who uses the gun for illegal purposes.

No legislation can prevent the criminal from securing and using guns. Reputable gun owners maintain that legislation should not be aimed at the firearms, but at its misuse. They do not oppose reasonable legislation regulating the carrying of a concealed hand gun, but they do oppose the theory that a target shooter, a hunter, or a collector should be required to meet the same conditions. They do oppose legislation which denies or interfers with individual rights of our citizens or is designed purely for the convenience of law enforcement or for the purpose of circumventing due process of law in order to more easily obtain convictions.

In their concern with trying to prevent the use of firearms in crime, too many people forget that the right to keep and bear arms is critically significant to a free people. In is not by accident or because of the temper and conditions of the times that a guarantee of the right of the people to keep and bear arms in the second item in the Bill of Rights. Like other protections of the individual in the Constituton, as originally amended, this was a product of a knowledge and understanding of history - the kind of history which those who fail to understand are doomed to repeat.

As we strive to solve the problems of increasing crime in some areas, our efforts must be based on reason and knowledge. not on emotions or misinforma-

Existing laws must be strictly enforced with severe additional penalties for individuals who use a firearm in the commission of a crime. Any proposed legislation must not be directed at firearms or the right to keep and bear arms, but at the illegal use of guns.

We, the adult leaders of the Wellsville Jaycees' Junior Rifle Club, urge members of sportsmen clubs, members of the law enforcement agencies, National Rifle Association members, hunters, target shooters, along with the private citizen, to write their legislators, (Rep. Wayne L. Hayes, Flushing, Ohio) and Sen. Edmond A. Sargus (First National Bank Building, Bellaire, Ohio) and urge them to give serious consideration to the upcoming bills concerning the control, ownership, and use of firearms.

The committee described ra-Ernest Neal and son, Bobby, of E. Lincoln Way had as their cial discrimination in public near bases as "particularly areas of the Far East." It said commanders should take vigorous action to eliminate patterns of segregation and discrimination affecting troops off base.

Johnson attended services Sunday St. Barnabas Episcopal Church in Fredericksburg. He was accompanied by Mrs. Johnson and his sister and brotherin-law, Mr. and Mrs. Birge Alexander of Fort Worth, Tex.

After the services they visited the graves of Joseph W. and Ruth A. Baines, the President's maternal grandparents, in the Fredericksburg community cemetery.

Late Saturday Johnson slipped away from his ranch to attend funeral services for R. S. Chambers, 80, in Mart, a central Texas town of 2,500. Chambers had been a Democratic party worker.

Over the weekend, Johnson filled three major government jobs. 1. James S. Gleason Jr., resigned as administrator of veterans affairs to return to the First National Bank in Chicago as first vice president. Johnson named William J. Driver to succeed him.

Driver, 45, has been deputy administrator of the VA.

2. Joseph P. McMurray resigned as chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to become president of Queens College in New York. Johnson named John E. Horne, a member of the board for the past 18 months, to succeed McMurray. Horne formerly headed the Small Business Administration.

3. John A. Carver Jr. of Boise. Idaho got a recess appointment as undersecretary of interior. Carver has been assistant secretary since Jan. 30, 1961. As undersecretary he succeeds James K. Carr, who resigned last July 15.

LUXURY AND INDOOR-OUTDOOR LIVING are the essence of HA375M, designed by Rudolph A. Matern, 90-04 161st St., Jamaica, N. Y. 11432. The master suite provides full private bath, dressing room, plenty of closets, built-in cabinets, lounge area and sliding glass doors to private terrace. Bath has door to outside of house, so it can serve the porch, terrace and pool as well as bedrooms. Sliding doors open from three bedrooms, dining room and breakfast room on to outdoor porches. Exterior of the home is long, low and sleek; pierced roof lends light to the living room. Plan HA375M contains 1,642 square feet of living space.

Yet, even in normal times, it is essential that such leaks be taken care of quickly. They can send water bills soaring, c u t for the tank to refill.

After making the repair, leave the tank cover off while you flush the tank several times, allowing time between flushings for the tank to refill. heavily into reservoir supplies for the tank to refill. and place unnecessary strains on individual wells.

One of the most frequent offenders in this respect is the water or flush tank in back of the toilet bowl.

If water drips or flows from the tank into the bowl when it is not in use, the waste of water over the period of a month can be tremendous, far more when a faucet is in need of a new washer.

There are a number of reasons for the leakage from a flush tank, too many to go into detail about them in this alloted space.

But we can at least discuss one of the most common causes -the failure of the rubber ball valve at the bottom of the tank to drop perfectly on the valve seat. If you lift up the top of the tank, you'll see a vertical rod, at the bottom of which is a rubber valve shaped like a ball or bell. After the tank has been flushed, this valve returns to its position on the valve seat. keeping the water in the tank sealed in. When it doesn't fit properly, water leaks under the valve and into the tank.

One trouble may be improper positioning of the bracket that keeps the vertical rod in place. See if the bracket is loose. If so, tighten it after being certain that the vertical rod is directly If you've been wondering what | For a house that's too tall for | For instance, take a house over the center of the valve seat. Cloud Seeks Testimony On Apportioning

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) House Speaker Roger Cloud, R-Logan, called today for further testimony at a Rules Committee hearing on a proposal designed to get around the U.S. Supreme Court "one man, one vote" edicts.

The high court decreed that lawmakers must be elected in areas of nearly equal population and Ohio has acted to comply.

But Cloud said he wanted op-ponents of an Ohio proposal to request a federal constitutional convention on legislative apportionment to testify at an open

Sen. Frank J. Lausche, Ohio's only five-term governor, came out for the proposal in a statement issued in his home town of Cleveland.

He expressed concern lest a population-only basis for electing legislators lead to "domination of metropolitan areas with their political bosses and labor lead-

The Ohio AFL-CIO reiterated its opposition in its weekly publication. The labor organ said GOP legislative leaders might well listen to Sen. Charles W. Whalen, R - Montgomery, who criticized efforts to make Ohio one of the states seeking to over turn the court's reapportionment decision.

Other than U.S. Rep. William McCulloch, Piqua Republican, who sponsored a similar proposal in Congress, witnesses at the hearing generally opposed the proposal.

Several appeared at a hearing last Tuesday to oppose the proposal. The resolution would have Ohio's legislature join other states in asking Congress for a constitutional convention to act on an amendment allowing states to select members of one legislative house on factors other than population.

Favorable action by 34 states on the resolution, drafted by the Council of State Governments, would require that such a convention be called, Cloud explained. Approval of a conventiondrafted change in the U.S. Constitution by 38 states then would be required to make it effective, Legislatures of 17 states already have approved similar or identical resolutions for a convention, he added.

Cloud indicated he did not expect the Ohio resolution to reach the House floor in Tuesday's windup session of the special session that completed regular work Dec. 17 after six weeks of toil. He expressed hope it would receive consideration in

To comply with U.S. Supreme Court decisions, the special session approved an amendment to the state constitution calling for election of Ohio House members in areas of virtually equal population. Voters will accept or reject the plan at the polls in the May 4 election.

The Ohio Senate would not be affected.

The Rules Committee also will consider a Senate-approved bill to give Republican Lt. Gov. John W. Brown power to break tie Senate votes on legislation in the equally divided upper chamber in the regular session convening Jan. 4.

3 cheers for parties!

Canada Dry Ginger Ale and Club Soda are America's No. 1 Mixers

Tis the season for good cheer, and here are three of the cheeriest: Canada Dry Ginger Ale-still the world's finest, the champagne of ginger ales; Canada Dry Club Soda-the mixer that gives a bright lift to every other liquid in its glass; and Canada Dry Collins Mixer-the best thing that ever happened to Tom (or Dick or Harry, for that matter). Don't forget to invite all three Canada Dry mixers to your house. They can really cheer up a party when they toss their caps in the air.

objects fall faster than light QUESTION: Do heavy objects?

ANSWER: One might think they did, for we know the force of gravity makes objects fall toward the center of the earth, and we might think more gravity was pulling on a heavy object than a light one. In (1) John has released a quarter and a pit of very light tissue paper at the same time. The heavier coin is falling much faster. Prove this by repeating John's experiment. The Greek philospher Aristotle reasoned from such experiments that the speed of a body's fall was in proportion to its weight and this view was held for 2000 years until disproved by the Italian astronomer Galileo. There is a legend that Galileo dropped two iron balls, one larger and heavier, from the top of the Leaning Tower of Pisa and they reached the ground at nearly the same time. He then realized that the resistance of the air is what makes different objects fall at different speeds. Further proof came in 1650 when a pump was invented to take air out of a tube. Without air, it was found that objects of different weights fall at exactly the same speed (upper right). Now try John's second experiment; wad the bit of tissue into a tight ball; it will fall almost as fast as the coin. With less size, there is less air resistance to slow it up.

FOR YOU TO DO: Try still another experiment: find a bit of flat metal and cut a piece of cardboard the same size; drop them together. The metal falls faster - because air resistance works the most on objects light in proportion
